RED LETTER DAY FOR OLD LOUISA

Courthouse Dedication and Confederate Monument Unveiling.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.) LOUISA. VA., August 16 .- "We ar-Two score years have rolled down the ringing grooves of change between the shot and shell and this night when starlit heavens look down upon a placid beauty. Swords has been turned into pruning books, and the trodden fields of armed hosts now smile in their pleasing vestures of living green. But the memory of those days yet lives, undimmed by the flight of years. What though the dove of peace hovers loyal hearts are kult into an indissolu-

What though the dove of peace hovers o'er the banner of a reunited land and loyal hearts are knit into an indissoluble bond of American brotherhood, base would be the thought, that cherished memory of the Bouth's honored sons and of their devotion to constitutional liberty is disloyalty.

Before sunrise the main thoroughfares of this goodly old shire will be crowded with vehicles bringing the people from far and near to the stirring events that will mark the morrow—for it will be a red letter day in the history of the town and county. Confederate veterans with the frost of many winters upon their heads and éternal spring in their hearts will be here, and their devoted wives, daughters and sons; the remaining thin line of crstwhile faithful old darkey slaves will come hither. Beaux will bring their sweethearts. The sons of the sires that helped to brighten history's page and their fair helpmeets will help to "raise the anthem and swell the sons." The railroad trains will detrain many a Confederate veteran camp from other sections of the State to join in the celebration. Native citizens of the county, now living in other States, will be largely represented. It will be a great gathering and a great occasion. Many will meet perhaps for the first time since the war. There will be hearty greetings, embraces, anecdotes, laughter and tears. And the missing veterans who have "crossed over the river to rest under the shade of the trees" will be present in the heart memory of thoses surviving "boys of the gray." for whill "Cold in the ground their treasured hearts may be.

And Louisa is all prepared to receive her army of guests. Pretty decorations greet the eye. Everything presents a spic and span appearance. The streets are as clean as a carpeted floor. The court green templs to a loil. The pretty grove wherein the multitude is to be fed from the larder of Louisa's farfamed hospitality, seems impatient for the coming of her guests. And how the tables will groan under the weight of country-cured hams, fr excellent.

The writer belonged to the "Infantry Corps" in the days that this celebration recalls. I distinctly remember when Wade Hampton and Fitz, Lee intercepted Sheridan's march from Waker's Ford, and there was a skirmish on Van Lew's Hill, about two miles from town. A bovy of tables on the upper perch of the height Hill, about two miles from town. A bevy of ladies on the upper porch of the brick store then known as "Cash Corner" permitted this infantryman to use a field glas to see the fight. I could not then understand why the eyes of these fair ladies filled with tears, but I understood better when one day I popeed into the Methodist Church, that was then used for hospital purposes, I will always remember as one of my childhood's heart-crushing experiences the following incident: ARMY BY RAIL.

ARMY BY RAIL.

Our army was being moved by rail from the castern section to the Valley. Train after train of soldlers passed here. We learned that father was on a certain section, and Colonel P. W. Jones (father Train after train of soldlers passed here. We learned that father was on a certain section, and Colonel P. W. Jones (father of Dr. J. William Jones, who speaks hero to-morrow) assisted my mother to prepare some knick-knacks for him. I had a plump red apple in each hand, and while awaiting the time for the train I dropped into a doze. The train whistled sooner than was expected, and mother and "Uncle" William hurried to catch it. I couldn't "keep up," "stumped" my toe, fell down, lost my apples in the darkness (it was night), and ilmped, crying, on up the street to the corner, where I could see the railway station, and lot the cruel engine made no stop at the water tank! Yes, the children of the Confederacy had their heartaches and their privations too. Edward Thompson (peace to his ashies) was "general" and I "colonel" of this "infantry." We delighted to sit on our respective gate posts and see the army march by. I well remember the "potato coffee" and the manufacture of "wax candles," and had an opportunity to be intimately, acquainted with the devotion to duty and heroism of the women of the Confederacy, God bless their memory! The occasion awakens hallowed memories. Paraphrasing a sentiment of the late Colonel William S. Gilman, expressed in a harheeue political speech at Bell's Cross Roads, in the Tiden-Hayes campaign. If can truthfully say: "Whorever on life's tempestuous seen my barque may be cast, the old refrain, 'carry me back to old Louisa,' played on a cornstalk fiddle, will be sweeter music to my ears than the finest rendition of the Marsielles by an imperial band."

The officers of Louisa camp that will take such a prominent part in the exertaces of the morning are William Kean.

surviving veterans well knew that the success of every laudable effort depends upon the active sympathy of the laides and the response of Louisn's fair daughters was prompt and enthusiastic. They called a preliminary meeting, which was held in the Baptist Church on May 17, 1922, and a temporary organization of the "Louisa Monument Association" was formed, a committee of ladies being appointed to draft a plan of permanent orformed, a committee of ladies being appointed to draft a plan of permanent organization, draw up constitution and by-inws, etc. The preliminary meeting then adjourned to meet on May 22d, at the Louisa Hotel. This second meeting was presided over by Mrs. F. W. Sims, wife of Judge Sims, of the then county court. The committee on permanent organization made a full report which was duly adopted and the following officers were elected:

W. L. Sheppard and others in regard to the monument design. Soon after this the monument was contracted for, Mr. Sheppard, the well known artist of Rich-Sheppard, the/well known artist of Richmond, undertaking the work, and on November 12th the pretty memorial now to be unveiled was in place, and it is a memorial both unique and highly artistic. The ladies wrought nobly, and their efforts are highly appreciated by the Louisa Camp and the people of the county generally. They have reffected great credit upon themselves, upon their goodly (did county, and upon the heroes of a cause dear to the Southern heart. I anticipated the courteous declination of my invitation to print the picture of of a cause dear to the Southern heart. I anticipated the courteous declination of my invitation to print the picture of the officers of the association, for the proverbial modesty of Louisa ladies forbids such exploitation of themselves in connection with an unselfish labor of love. But the popular mind and heart will ever regard this artistic monument of their selection and erection as also a monument to their own unselfish and loyal devotion and to their superb good laste.

At the close of the oratorical exercises, the multitude will be given a dinner. Yas, Louisa hospitality will be quite equal to the occasion of providing lavishly of her bountiful stores for all those thousands of guests. Two hours will be given for due investigation of the cibiles, acquaintance making and renewing, and a good social time generally. Then, the 'inner man' having been abundantly satisfied, at 3 o'clock the voterans will lead the return march to the courthouse square for the cornerstone laying exercises. The Masonic procession will form and proceed from the Masonie Hall to the courthouse and at 3:20 P. M. the stone will be laid "in due and ancient form" in charge of the Grand Master of Masons of Virginia, At 4 o'clock a procession will enter the new building in the following order: Board of supervisors, will grestde over the meeting, in company with the full koard. Hey. T. Meade, chairman of the board of expervisors, will preside over the meeting, in company with the full koard. Hey. T. H. Campbell, of the Methodist Church, will offer prayer. Captain Frank V. Winston will deliver an address, 'Historia Reminiscences in Connection With the Old Courthouse Now Displaced by, the New Structure," and Judge A. K. Leace, of Goochland, will address the meeting on "The Bench, Bar and Citizons of Louisa." Both of these addresses are looked forward to with pleasurable anticipation. The adoptoment of this meeting will conclude the day's programme, and soon the sun will have gone down on Louisa's gala day; but the remembrances of the pleasing occasion will everbe as "apples of gold in pictures of sliver' on memory's waits.

The racing this afternoon was close and exciting. The running race, mile heats, best two in three, was especially good. Nearly all the distance three horses ran hunched, and the official time of one were elected;

Mrs. Jesse J. Porter, president; Mrs. Charles E. Hughes, first vice-president; Mrs. Floyd Chaney, second vice-president; Mrs. Floyd Chaney, second vice-president; Miss Ellen H. Kent, secretary; Mrs. Hazel, owned by Dr. W. E. Fahrney, won the first three heats. The half mile dash for two and three-year-olds was selected. Mrs. Floyd Chaney, second vice-president; Miss Ellen H. Kent, secretary; Mrs. Susan McComb, assisiant secretary; Mrs. F. W. Sims, treasurer.

The organization went to work with great zeal and determination. Contribution Committees were designated, entertainments were given to assist in raising funds, letters of solicitation were sent out, and the fund multiplied with graiffying rapidity. On June 12, 1065, a conference was held with the Louisa Camp, with the result that the association was asked to continue work until October 1st, and after that time preparations to be made for the selection of the monument and its erection. On February 11, 1964, a committee, composed of Judge and Mrs. Sims, Mrs. William Kean, Miss Ellen Kent, Dr. Joseph W. Baken and Mr. Philip P. Porter, met in Murphy's Hotel parlor, in the city of Richmond, and had a conference with Mr. W. L. A chartered train brought the Norfolk friends out to the dedication. The train was stopped not at a station, but at a road about half a mile from the hall, and conveyances met the train at that point and carried all of the visitors to the ground. All were highly pleased with the appearance of the hall and the dinner that was served. Several of the visitors to the train was served on the ground, all were highly pleased with the appearance of the hall and the dinner that was served. Several of the visitors to be in a little trouble (after dinner), and expressed fears that their belts would not hold, and were looking around to see it an extra belt could not be had. It has been a hard pull to build the hall, but now that it is completed it is a credit to the order of Odd-Fellows and to the few lodges who responded to their aid about two years ago and to whom the sincere thanks of Calla Lodge is extended.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

ABINGDON, VA, Algust 15-Mrs.

Eliza Vance, aged for fyty-tears, was beatten almost to death near her home here this evening by her-shipshand. Robert Vance. The sole cause of the man's crime seems to be jealousy. He came home, and not finding her inquired for her. He was told that she had left the house and gone down the railroad.
He left the house and followed left. In the meantlime, a heavy rain had begun to fall, and Mrs. Vance had taken shelter in a car used by men working for the Whiting Lumber Company. He found her there, and at once entered the car and began beating her over the head with a club, cutting such gashes in her head that she bled profusely, jerked her out of the car and ordered her to go home. She started, when he again struck her. Some men dragged the cruel husband away from the helploss woman.

She went home barely able to walt and covered with blood. Dr Brady was called by neighbors after Mrs. Vance arrived home and dressed the wounds. She is in a dangerous condition, and it is kighly probable that death will result.

Vance was arrested and immediately given a trial before Mayor Hines, who remanded him to fall to await the action of the grand jury.
